*A LEAF-FULL
of LEAVES*

2016, VOLUME 3

I

I

What an amazing theatre!
I'm watching a brilliantly simple movie.
The projector is 93 million miles away;
the roll of film is 60 feet away;
and the screen is 12 feet away.
But we are all lined up,
pretty much.

II

The projector is the sun;
the roll of film is a tall, elegant Willow tree;
the screen is an almost-circular vine leaf
of about seven inches diameter.

And I am looking through the screen from behind it.

The sun is shining through the tree
and casting the shadows of the Willow leaves
onto the vine leaf,
which is doing a slow waltz,
choreographed by a petulant zephyr.

III

The Willow, too, dances;
causing the shadow of its leaves
to dance upon the dancing vine leaf;
all of which dance on my retina
which invites my brain to dance.

IV

A vine leaf, filled
with Willow leaf shadows,
carefully carrying its burden
lest it drop any.
What a wonderful
mother you are!

Namasté,

Seán
